

Tall Tales

2nd
GRADE

Table of Contents

Tall Tales

Johnny Appleseed Coloring Page
Johnny Appleseed Story
John Henry Coloring Page
John Henry Story
Paul Bunyan Coloring Page
Paul Bunyan Story
Pecos Bill Coloring Page
Pecos Bill Story
Captain Stormalong Coloring Page
Captain Stormalong Story
Tall Tales
Courageous Characters
Tall Tales: Mapping Settings
Tall Tales: Fantastic Feats
This Story Is Insane!
Tell a Tall Tale
Hyper Hyperbole
Your Tall Tale

Certificate of Completion

Want more workbooks? Join Education.com Plus to save time and money.
<http://www.education.com/education-plus/>

Hi! My name is John Chapman, but you might know me better as Johnny Appleseed!
I traveled the Midwest planting apple trees and medicinal plants for all to enjoy!

Johnny Appleseed

Tall tales don't always tell the truth! See if you can separate fact from fiction: read the tall tale of Johnny Appleseed below, then list parts of the story that could be true and the parts that probably aren't in the chart on the right.

He wore clothes made of rags and feed sacks, and he often wore a cooking pot on his head! He became a recognizable figure across the American west. No one knew him very well, but families recognized him by his unique appearance. When children saw him coming, they begged their mothers to let them go outside to meet him. After 200 years, some of the trees he planted are still standing and growing apples!

Johnny Appleseed was born John Chapman in 1774. He roamed the Western frontiers, planting apple trees across the country so that families settling in the lonely West would always have food to eat. His life's goal was to spread knowledge of farming and conservation. He recognized the importance of growing plants and farming, especially in the early days of the American west when transportation was not yet up and running, and food could not be shipped across the country the way it is today.

True	Make-Believe

Hi! My name is John Henry!
I was the strongest man and fastest steel driver that ever lived. I helped build the railroads that linked the country for the first time. I even won a race against an automatic hammer meant to replace me!

John Henry

Tall tales don't always tell the truth! See if you can separate fact from fiction: read the tall tale of John Henry below, then list parts of the story that could be true and the parts that probably aren't in the chart on the right.

John Henry was a steel-driver who worked on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway. He was the fastest steel-driver who ever lived! He was over seven feet tall and 300 pounds of muscle, and could hammer faster than any person you've ever met.

One day, his boss came to work with a mechanical steam-powered hammer. "This machine can drive ten times as many holes as any person, and will save us money and time!" he said joyfully.

"I beg to differ," said John. "No machine can replace me or any of my co-workers. I challenge you and your hammer to a contest. Let's drive clean through that mountain, and we'll just see who – or what – finishes first."

The man and the machine set off on a race. The steam hammer was fast, but John Henry was a lot faster!

He finished drilling through the mountain in ten minutes flat, the steam hammer far behind him.

True	Make-Believe

This is Paul Bunyan! Some say it took five storks to carry him when he was a baby!

When he grew up, he and his pet ox, Babe, roamed across the country chopping down trees and forging new paths across North America!

Paul Bunyan

Tall tales don't always tell the truth! See if you can separate fact from fiction: read the tall tale of Paul Bunyan below, then list parts of the story that could be true and the parts that probably aren't in the chart on the right.

Paul Bunyan was a lumberjack who tamed the great American forests. He and his pet ox, Babe, traveled across the country, where he chopped down the tallest trees all by himself!

Legend says he was so big when he was born, it took five storks to carry him to his parents, and his first bed was a lumber wagon. After just a week of being born, he was able to fit in his father's clothing. When he was old enough to speak and laugh, the vibrations broke all the windows in the house, and scared the frogs and fish right out of nearby ponds!

When he got older, he created the mountains by piling rocks on top of one another.

His pet ox, Babe, was just as big. It's said that the Great Lakes started off as his foot-prints!

True

Make-Believe

Howdy! This is Pecos Bill, the cowboy that shaped the Wild West! Ol' Bill created Death Valley by riding a tornado across the land, and dug the Rio Grande as a trough for his horse!

Pecos Bill

Tall tales don't always tell the truth! See if you can separate fact from fiction: read the tall tale of Pecos Bill below, then list parts of the story that could be true and the parts that probably aren't in the chart on the right.

It's said that when Pecos Bill was just a baby, he was traveling with family across the country in a covered wagon, the way many people did on their quest to find their fortune in the West. Somewhere near the Pecos River in Texas, Bill fell out the back of the wagon. Separated from his parents, he spent his childhood being raised by coyotes in the wilds of Texas.

When he grew older, he became an extraordinary man! He was several feet tall and had a horse named Lightning who was just as fantastic. Lightning's favorite food was dynamite, dinner every night! Together, Bill and Wild West. One Lightning tamed the saw a tornado on the horizon. He grabbed his trusty lasso and wrangled it into submission – but it put up a fight first! The Grand Canyon marks the path the tornado took as Pecos Bill dragged it behind him.

True

Make-Believe

Old Bill had a woman named Slue Foot Sue, who was just as tall as him and ten times as pretty. He was determined to marry her, and one night, while trying to impress her, he shot out the stars, leaving only one for her to marvel at – the Lone Star of Texas.

Captain Stormalong was born 2 fathoms tall (that's about 12 feet!). Naturally, he'd need a ship big enough to accommodate his height.
His ship was so big and so tall it grazed the moon.
With it, he created the Panama Canal by accidentally hitting the Panamanian coast!

Captain Stormalong

Tall tales don't always tell the truth! See if you can separate fact from fiction: read the tall tale of Captain Stormalong below, then list parts of the story that could be true and the parts that probably aren't in the chart on the right.

Captain Alfred Bulltop Stormalong was one of the greatest sailors in the world, and perhaps the largest too. He was born in Massachusetts. As a boy he was a bit different than other boys his age. He was already 2 fathoms--or 12 feet--tall! Some people say he grew up to be more than 30 feet tall. Captain Stormalong's ship was named the Courser, and was so wide that it couldn't even fit in the Boston Harbor. Its mast was so tall that it scraped the moon, and its keel was so deep that it scraped the ocean floor.

Captain Stormalong was famous for many things. But perhaps his most famous story was how he defeated the kraken--a giant sea creature! The enormous kraken was half octopus and half sea snake, and could crush a ship with just one swipe of its tentacles. The first time they battled, Stormalong jumped out of his ship, creating a tidal wave that went all the way to China.

True

Make-Believe

He swam to the bottom of the sea to face the kraken, but it was too fast and got away. So the next time, Stormalong was ready with a lasso, and looped a giant rope around the kraken's neck, just like the cowboys do. The angry kraken swam and swam, towing the ship behind it, when suddenly it swam into a mighty whirlpool. The kraken and the ship went 'round and 'round until finally Stormalong let go of the rope. His ship was flung through the air and safely back onto the water, while the kraken went down in the whirlpool, never to be seen again.

Tall Tales are stories that were popular with American settlers in the 1800's. these stories involved heroic characters overcoming obstacles through extraordinary acts of speed, strength, or bravery. These stories were told aloud and over time became more and more exaggerated and impossible to believe. Even though the stories were larger than life, they were based on real-life problems faced by people of the time.

Tall Tales generally include:

- a larger-than-life character
- a problem or obstacle
- funny or impossible elements
- action
- a triumph

Read the following tall tales. Which tall tale elements are included in each story? Complete the chart by checking off each one that you find in the story.

	Larger-Than-Life Character	Problem or Obstacle	Funny or impossible elements	Action	A Triumph
Johnny Appleseed
Paul Bunyan
John Henry
Captain Stormalong
Pecos Bill

COURAGEOUS CHARACTERS

Tall tale characters are depicted as larger-than-life, with superhuman abilities. Create a portrait for each tall tale character. List the character's superhuman qualities in the frame.

TALL TALES: MAPPING SETTINGS

Tall tales are exaggerated stories that include superhuman characters and impossible details. However, the characters often faced real-world problems faced by early settlers in different regions of the United States.

See if you can match these tall tale characters to a region on the map!

Cut these names out and paste them where their stories take place!

PAUL BUNYAN

Johnny Appleseed

JOHN HENRY

CAPTAIN STORMALONG

PECOS BILL

Tall Tales: Fantastic Feats

Tall tales show characters overcoming obstacles, winning battles, or completing amazing feats through superhuman speed, strength, or bravery. Choose your favorite tall tale character. Write and draw to show the problem faced by your character, as well as the solution. Then think of another funny or impossible solution to the problem.

Character: _____

Problem: _____

Solution: _____

Alternative Solution: _____

This Story Is Insane!

An exercise with hyperbole

Directions: Fold your worksheet on the line. Fill in the spaces below with the word of your choice (no peeking!). Then place those words in the spaces where they belong within the story. Read your story aloud to your friends!

1. type of car

2. small animal

3. big animal

4. unit of distance

5. distance away (close, far)

6. one of the 5 senses

7. unit of time

8. famous building

9. type of flowing water

10. impossible feat

Fold here!

Once upon a time there was a dog named Milo. Milo was as fast as a _____ _____ and as strong as a _____. One day Milo was so hungry he could eat a _____, so he went to find himself something to eat. Milo had an amazing sense of smell and could smell food from a _____ away! As he walked through the park, he caught the scent of a delicious bone somewhere near him. It was so _____ he could almost _____ it! He searched for _____ but couldn't find it.
Suddenly, a man as tall as the _____ walked passed him eating a chicken leg. Milo drooled so much it was like a _____ flowing from his mouth! The man laughed, pet Milo on the head, and handed him the bone. Milo was so happy he could _____
_____ !!!

Tell a Tall Tale!

Create a Character

Think of a person you admire. Use the chart below to list real and imagined qualities that would make this character a good candidate for a tall tale.

Name: _____

Qualities:

Real Qualities	Imagined Qualities

Tell a Tall Tale!

Plot A Problem

Think of a real world problem or obstacle that your character might face. Sketch to show the setting where your character would encounter this problem, and write a short description of the problem.

Tell a Tall Tale!

Show A Solution

Draw two possible solutions to the problem. Refer back to your character's real and imagined qualities to show how they help him/her to triumph. Star your strongest idea.

Solution One

Solution Two

Hyper Hyperbole!

A hyperbole is a figure of speech. It uses exaggeration, a statement that makes something seem much better or worse than it really is. Hyperbole is used to turn average descriptions into hilarious characteristics!

Directions: Write down 5 family members or friends. Next to their names write one thing you admire about them, or something they are good at. Then create a humorous hyperbole about the description you gave them!

Example:

Name: Mikey Skill/Trait: Always hungry

Hyperbole: Mikey can smell a pizza from a mile away!

1. Name: _____ Skill/Trait: _____

Hyperbole: _____

2. Name: _____ Skill/Trait: _____

Hyperbole: _____

3. Name: _____ Skill/Trait: _____

Hyperbole: _____

4. Name: _____ Skill/Trait: _____

Hyperbole: _____

5. Name: _____ Skill/Trait: _____

Hyperbole: _____

Make up a tall tale about yourself using a favorite trait that you like about yourself. Turn your favorite trait into an exaggeration, and then into a story!

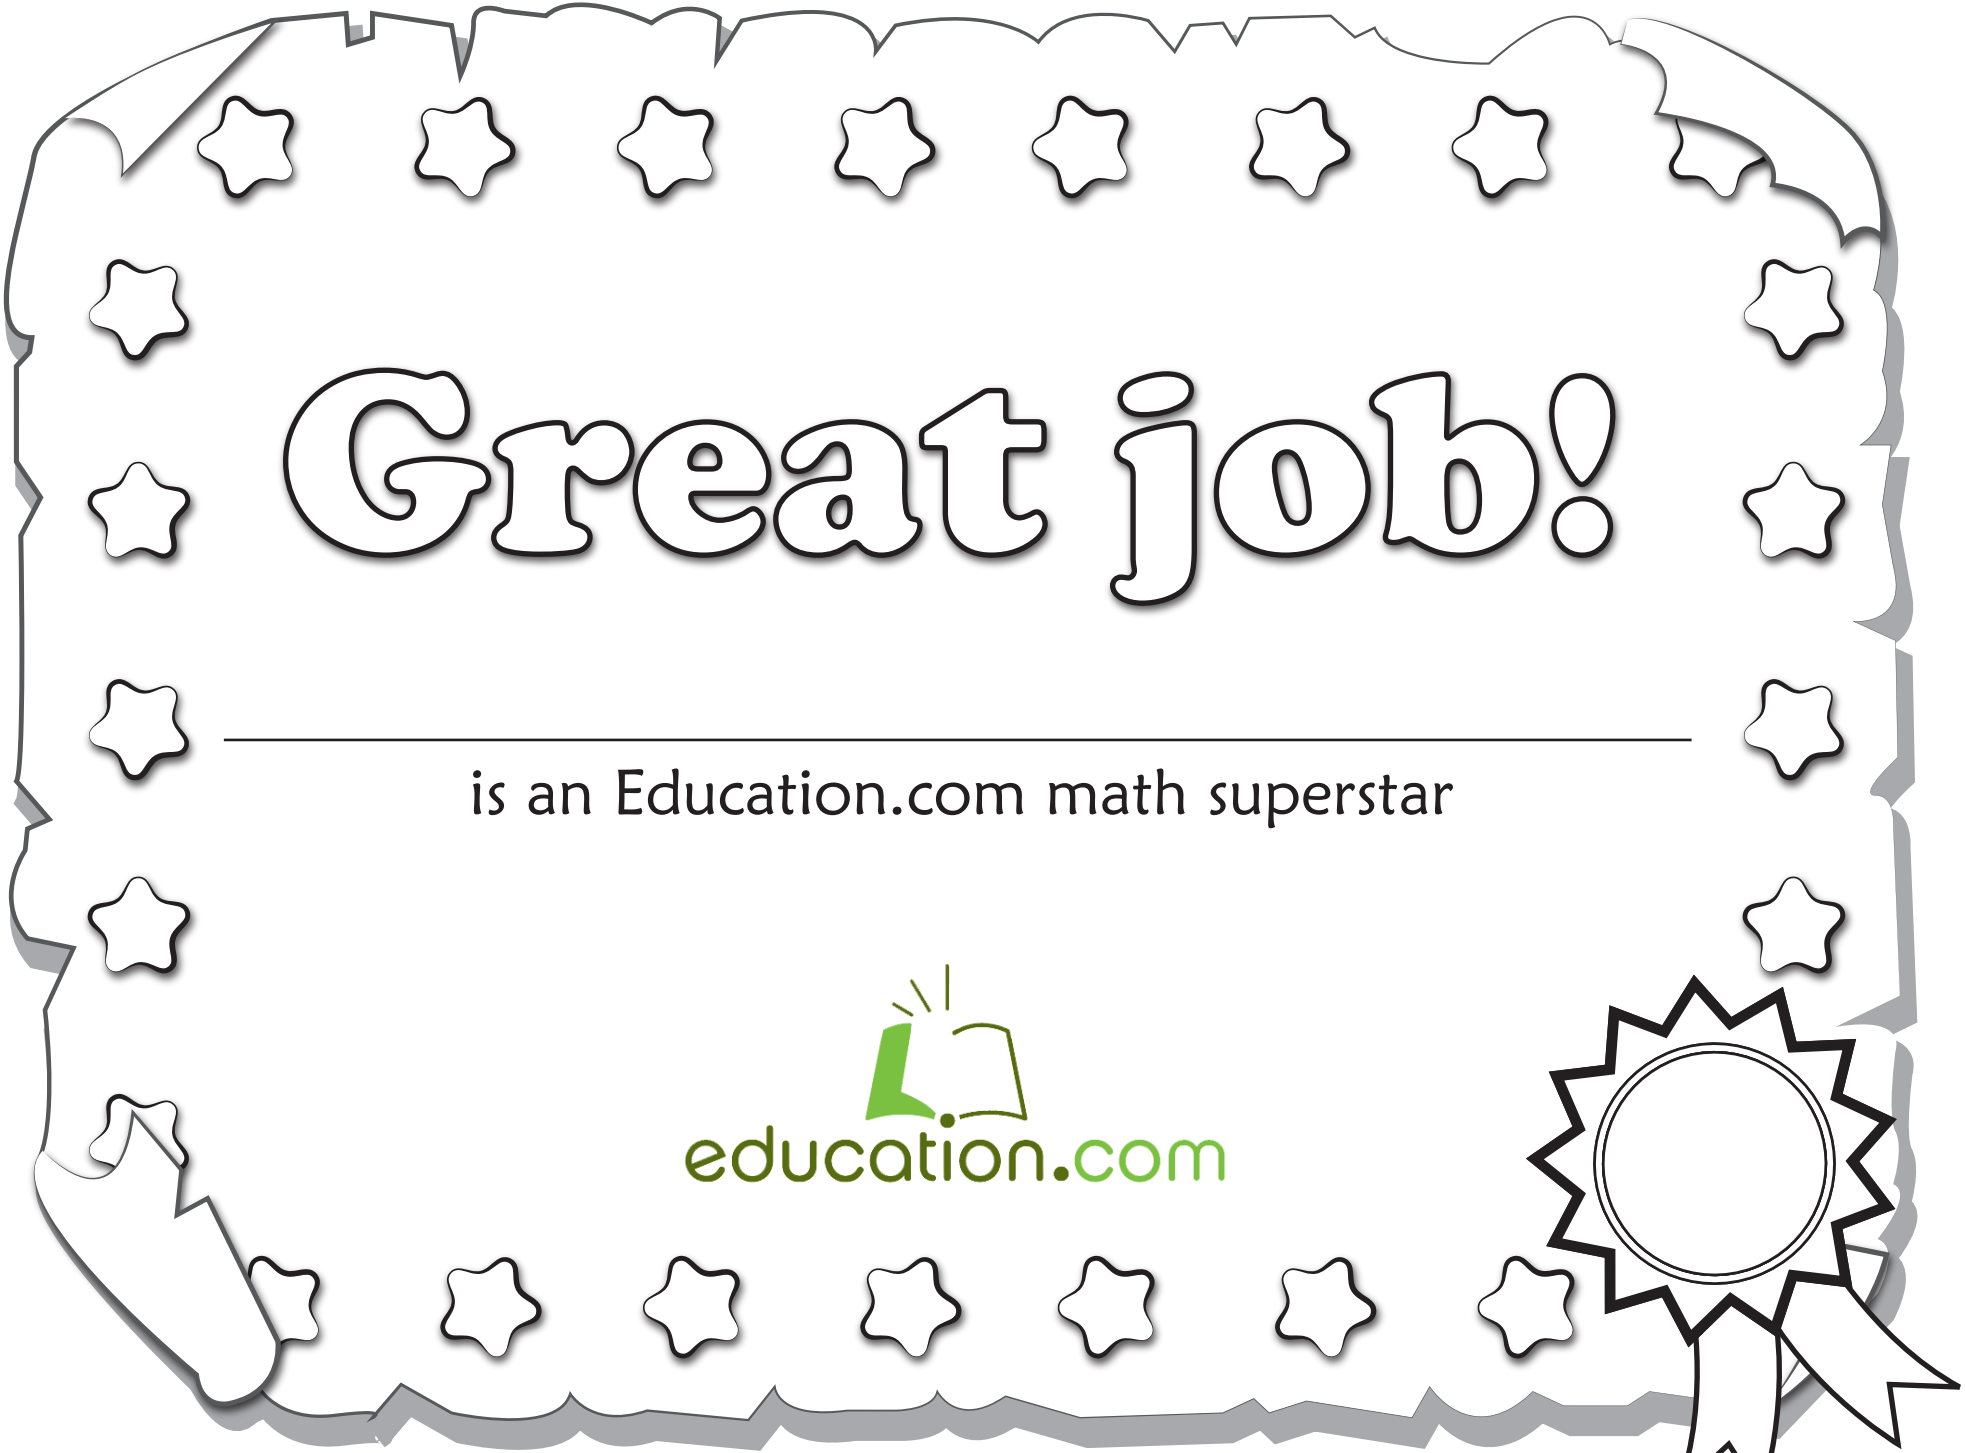

Title: _____

Written by: _____

Real-Life Trait: _____

Exaggerated Trait: _____

Great job!

is an Education.com reading superstar

